Abstract	THE TIME PROBLEM FOR PUPILS “You can’t expect children like these to read anything but The Saturday Evening Post at night. It’s the tired-business-man psychology. They don’t get home from school, most of them, until about five-thirty, and they have at least two hours of studying to do after dinner. All day at school they are stimulated, and at night they are bound to be tired. Besides, they are city children. You are used to a country situation—the suburb you taught in was like the country; there the children had plenty of time. Here children go to the movies more, and do many things not done by country children. You’ll find out that city children simply cannot read what you expect them to read.”
